“TWO IMPLEMENTS IN ONE”

Versatility, simplicity and speed: When brothers Laurent and Didier Bazin replaced their cultivator, they chose the Franquet Combigerm.

They farm 270 ha of arable land at Saint Pierre Aigle in the Aisne Department, with 70 ha under sugar beet and 42 ha under potato.

What led you to choose the Franquet Combigerm?

We were attracted by the Combigerm's versatility. We needed a machine capable of both preparing the sugar beet seeding area on the surface and of being effective enough to work at a deeper level for potato planting.

How does the Combigerm function with these crops?

To prepare the ground for potatoes, the five rows of straight, vibrating teeth are fully utilised for breaking up clods and refining the soil to a depth of between 15cm and 18cm. With sugar beet, these teeth are set to operate on the surface. In front, the spire breaks up the clods and accurately maintains the working depth. Behind, the seedbed cultivator, supplemented by two rollers which can be adjusted by a set of pins, settles, to a lesser or greater extent, the soil being prepared..

Which other feature do you appreciate in this machine?

Probably the easy adjustment. Sometimes we prepare patches for both crops on the same day. But the Combigerm can be adjusted extremely quickly and moves from one site to the other without any time being lost. For our sugar beets and our potatoes, the implement is two implements in one.
